Sociology is a comprehensive and systematic study of society and human behaviour. It tries to understand and explain the social structures, processes which influence human interactions. Sociologists study all aspects of social life, from small groups to large scale communities and institutions. The discipline examines fundamental human institutions such as family, religion, political and economic systems. Study of institutions and structures help us to understand how individuals are socialised into the way of society or not. Sociology not only looks at some enduring patterns and structures but also tries to understand and explain changes. In addition to providing a theoretical and factual foundation for the study of social issues, sociology teaches statistical and research skills required undertaking field studies. As societies become more and more complex, especially in the globalised world, the skills that sociologist acquire are valuable.

Honours in Sociology graduates who develop their basic skills, are well-placed to apply for a wide range of jobs that are not directly related to the subject matter of sociology itself and will find themselves well-prepared to adapt to changing opportunities. The BA Honours Programme in Sociology is designed to give the learner a strong foundation in the basic ideas, concepts, institutions and processes of society. The study of sociology is a launching pad to exciting careers in research, policy analysis, development work, and other positions requiring a strong social science foundation.

BASOH Program Structure
